So, are you a healthy leader? Use the Pope's inventory of leadership maladies to find out. Ask yourself, on a scale of 1 to 5, to what extent do I ...

- Feel superior to those who work for me?
- Demonstrate an imbalance between work and other areas of life?
- Substitute formality for true human intimacy?
- Rely too much on plans and not enough on intuition and improvisation?
- Spend too little time breaking silos and building bridges?
- Fail to regularly acknowledge the debt I owe to my mentors and to others?
- Take too much satisfaction in my perks and privileges?
- Isolate myself from customers and first-level employees?
- Denigrate the motives and accomplishments of others?
- Exhibit or encourage undue deference and servility?
- Put my own success ahead of the success of others?
- Fail to cultivate a fun and joy-filled work environment?
- Exhibit selfishness when it comes to sharing rewards and praise?
- Encourage parochialism rather than community?
- Behave in ways that seem egocentric to those around me?

As in all health matters, it's good to get a second or third opinion. Ask your colleagues to score you on the same fifteen items. Don't be surprised if they say, Gee boss, you're not looking too good today. Like a battery of medical tests, these questions can help you zero in on opportunities to prevent disease and improve your health. A Papal leadership assessment may seem like a bit of a stretch. But remember: the responsibilities you hold as a leader, and the influence you have over others' lives, can be profound. Why not turn to the Pope--a spiritual leader of leaders--for wisdom and advice? The 15 diseases of leadership, according to Pope Francis

Some Iowa State theses and dissertations are not eligible for open access. These may be accessible, with some restrictions, via ProQuest/UMI. On the ProQuest site, the full text of some theses and dissertations is available. Others can view only the first 25 pages of a thesis or dissertation from Iowa State. Finally, some Iowa State theses and dissertations exist only in paper format. For more information, see How to find dissertations and theses through the Iowa State University Library, or contact your subject librarian.

Students and Thesis Directors can contact Dr. Kay Banks by email (bankshk@mailbox.sc.edu) or contacting her at 803-777-2409. Expand all. Thesis Paper vs. Thesis Project.Â Begin thinking of potential topics and senior thesis/project directors. The thesis director must be a full-time USC faculty member. Use the Office of Undergraduate Research faculty database to search for potential thesis directors by areas of research: www.sc.edu/our/. This collection of MIT Theses in DSpace contains selected theses and dissertations from all MIT departments. Please note that this is NOT a complete collection of MIT theses. To search all MIT theses, use Barton, MIT Libraries' catalog. MIT's DSpace contains more than 53,000 theses completed at MIT dating as far back as the mid 1800's. Theses in this collection have been scanned by the MIT Libraries or submitted in electronic format by thesis authors. An acceptable M.Sc. thesis in Computer Science should attempt to satisfy one or more of the following criteria: Original research results are explained clearly and concisely. The thesis explains a novel exploratory implementation or a novel empirical study whose results will be of interest to the Computer Science community in general and to a portion of the Computer Science community in particular, e.g., Artificial Intelligence, Computational Complexity, etc. Novel implementation techniques are outlined, generalized, and explained.
