It was founded in 1908 by Gerald Rusgrove Mills and Charles Boon as a general publisher. The company moved towards escapist fiction for women in the 1930s. In 1971, the publisher was bought by the Canadian company Harlequin Enterprises, its North American distributor based in Toronto, with whom it had a long informal partnership. The two companies offer a number of imprints that between them account for almost three-quarters of Mills & Boon publishes 720 romantic novels a year. Featuring the kind of heroes their female readers can sigh and swoon over, they outsell true crime, science fiction and God in the bookshops. As fiction, they're easy to read â€” so surely it's easy to write one ...Â She tells me about a book where a waitress and a foreign prince have sex on a table. The heroine hates her bottom â€” she thinks it's too big â€” but he is overwhelmed by it. "Quite often a woman is made to recognise her own beauty through a fulfilling relationship with a man," she says.
