Cicely Saunders. Dame Cicely Saunders devoted her life to making sure people could die with dignity and free from pain. Convinced the last days of a person's life could be made happy, she said: "You matter because you are you, and you matter to the last moment of your life." She came from a wealthy but unhappy home and, against her will, was educated at Roedean, the exclusive girls' school. The shy and gawky child left school with, as she put it, a "compassion for the underdog". She went to Oxford, but left to become a nurse. When a back injury forced her out of the profession, she retrained as a medical social worker. Cicely Saunders, founder of the modern Hospice Movement. by. Du Boulay, Shirley. Please make sure Cicely Saunders founded the modern hospice movement, to provide care for dying cancer patients, and established the first British hospice in 1963 (opened 1967). She realized that British doctors and hospitals were dedicated to attempting cures, and that patients who had no prospect of recovery were out of place in their hands. In the 1940s and 1950s, she was ahead of her time in recognizing the close connection between a patient's physical, emotional, and spiritual condition, and drew frequent connections between her medical work and her profound Christian faith. du Boulay, Shirley.
