The question of why one should study geography is a valid question. Many around the world do not understand the tangible benefits of studying geography. Many might think that those who study geography have no career options in the field because most people do not know anyone who has the job title of "geographer." Nonetheless, geography is a diverse discipline that can lead to a myriad of career options in areas ranging from business location systems to emergency management. Study Geography to Understand Our Planet. Studying geography can provide an individual with a holistic understanding of o

1. Define "exploration." Ask students how they define "exploration," writing all ideas on the board. Next, ask: Who do you think of when you hear the word "explorer"? Explain that although explorers like Marco Polo or Christopher Columbus typically come to mind, there are many present-day explorers and anyone can be an explorer. In this activity students will investigate why people explore and consider places they would like to explore.
2. Brainstorm ideas about exploration. Use a round robin approach to generate students' ideas about exploration. Group 3-5 students at each table, and have them see more ideas about around the world theme, world geography, homeschool geography.
