

PREFACE

The history of ancient Bengal is in fact the history of Varendra-Pundra-Gaur and vice versa. Hence, there should not be any hesitation in calling Varendra region as the cradle of the archaeological evidences of the history of Bengal. But till the establishment of Varendra Research Society there was no proper recurrent exploration made in this region in order to assemble these evidences. Consequently, the ancient history of Bengal was not composed. The Varendra Research society assumed this worthy responsibility of sequential investigation of evidences in Varendra region to rediscover the early history of Bengal.

With the conscientious efforts of its members the Varendra Research Society was successful to carry out job of explorations contiguous to North Bengal and some other parts of Bengal, as well as few places of northern India. Besides, it carried out works of excavations in some antique sites of Bengal. Consequently, it has been able to assimilate huge collection of splendid and unique relics of the past civilization of Bengal. The library of the Varendra Research Society has been able to secure 11075 volumes by October, 1964. These invaluable archaeological cum literary sources were indispensably required for any serious investigation, particularly the ones that were related to the political and cultural history of ancient Bengal. And by utilizing these archaeological and literary ingredients the skilled scholars of the Society became successful to establish this society as the pioneer in rediscovering/reconstructing the early history of Bengal in modern scientific style.

An endeavor to present a systematic study of the 'Varendra Research Society: Its Vision and Mission(1910-1963)' has been made here in the subsequent pages. The work is prepared for the Doctorate Degree of the University of North Bengal.

In preparing this work, all accessible source materials both primary and secondary have been cautiously scrutinized before use. Uses of diacritical marks in common terms have been avoided.

Both mission and vision statements are often combined into one comprehensive "mission statement" to define the organization's reason for existing and its outlook for internal and external audiences -- like employees, partners, board members, consumers, and shareholders. With that in mind, what does a good mission statement look like? Honest Tea's mission statement begins with a simple punch line connoting its tea is real, pure, and therefore not full of artificial chemicals. The brand is speaking to an audience that's tired of finding ingredients in its tea that can't be pronounced, and have been searching for a tea that's exactly what it says it is.

Vision Statement: Its the way we do business. It's the way we interact with the community. It's the way we interpret the world around us-- our customers needs, the future of technology, and the global business climate.

Mission Statement: To be a responsible corporate citizen, nurturing human values and concern for society, the environment and above all, people. To contribute towards community development and nation building.

Vision statements and mission statements are both based on the core ethical values of an organization and are essential to its success because they give it direction. Vision statements drive the long-term goals that determine where the organization would eventually like to be in the competitive landscape. Mission statements are more concrete and specific to an organization's competitive advantage, and are used to prioritize activities. A vision statement thus specifies where an organization is going and a mission statement gives an organization direction on how to get there.

Mission and vision statements are powerful things. They clarify an organization's purpose, unify efforts, and keep everyone focused on what really matters. Click here to learn more now!

A mission statement is a short summary of an organization's core purpose, focus, and aims. This usually includes a brief description of what the organization does and its key objectives.

What is a Vision Statement?

A vision statement is a short description of an organization's aspirations and the wider impact it aims to create. It should be a guiding beacon to everyone within the organization and something which underpins internal decision-making and determines the intended direction of the organization.

Tier 1. Find the location from Madame Rogãt's vision. On the tip of the pyramid, your path shall be revealed.

Tier 2. Find the location from Madame Rogãt's vision. Shadows, long shadows, from the old boughs of the fairy forest, the flickering lights of the foolish fire guiding your path. Come, come! they beckon.

Tier 3. Find the location from Madame Rogãt's vision. There's bees, the incessant buzzing of bees, and flowers - flowers blooming out of season - to mark the path ahead.
