Trouble is, that's not what the Constitution says. November 23, 2019. Given this history, it should be unsurprising that Congress has repeatedly enacted legislation in the modern era prohibiting the use of funds to support various U.S. military activities abroad, or setting conditions on the distribution of security assistance to allies, effectively altering the course of U.S. foreign policy. And in response, presidents have complied. Read: House Democrats want to investigate Trump's foreign policy. This is in part why the current president's critical and apparently unlawful delay in delivering congressional authorized security assistance to Ukraine is so extrao Choose books together.
